

Latino

Hondureño Catracho (the national nickname; can be amusing, insulting, or friendly, depending on the context)

It's typically a laid back culture. There is a friendly and welcoming attitude toward international visitors.

However, the culture tends to still be machismo, which can often create a toxicity of abuse, harassment and submissive behaviors toward women and children

Language: Spanish, English

Brief History

Around 90 percent of the population is “Mestizo” (a mix of European & Latin American descent). It was a former Spanish colony.

Corruptions, drugs, and gangs are woven throughout their history. Latinos work extremely hard to overcome these obstacles.

Culture

Baleadas, a tortilla with beans and cheese, is a favorite. Fried green bananas are served often instead of rice.

Family life is considered very important Soccer... It's life. Latinos love sports, friends, and great conversations

The NEED:

We are working to serve alongside pastors in rural communities. Equipping them in some of the poorest areas to reach others with the story of Jesus.

Being the 2nd poorest country in Latin America, we work to provide food, clothes, and other humanitarian help when we can.

Quick Facts

- One of the highest rates of femicide in the World
- High rates of domestic violence

-Nearly 66% of latinos live in poverty.

-In rural areas, approximately one out of 5 Hondurans live in extreme poverty, or on less than US$1.90 per day.
